

Andrew Patterson
President for Africa, Bechtel

Andrew Patterson is Bechtel's Regional President for Africa. Andrew has more than +15 years ' experience in the construction industry and has been instrumental in developing and executing many of Bechtel's infrastructure projects around the world, including in Africa. From 2012-2015, he led the global business development team for infrastructure business line, including spending significant time developing networks and Infrastructure projects in key African markets.

Andrew has particular experience in successfully structuring and developing complex projects in developing markets. In 2010, Andrew was the Commercial Manager for the $1 billion Kosovo motorway project, which was successfully delivered a full year ahead of schedule and won the Program Management Award in the International Road Federation's Global Road Achievement Awards and ENR Global Best Projects Award. Andrew spent time in Panama to position Bechtel for infrastructure projects in the region, and specifically focused on the bid develop for the Panama Canal new third set of locks. He was also part of the construction management team for Bechtel's first project in Iceland, an aluminum smelter for Alcoa, and supporting AT&T telecommunication projects in the United States.